THE GRAND

"Clothes," a dramatic version of society life into which is woven a bit of romance, is the Grand feature.

Olive Sherwood, the daughter of a wealthy Omaha banker, is a pretty girl, very fond of money, but inexperienced and knowing little of the deeper currents of life. To satisfy her longing for fine clothes, her father invests in some Red Star Mining company stock that later proves to be a wildcat proposition. Ultimately, Olive goes to New York and there she enjoys the whirl of metropolitan society. She meets West, the New York broker, who sold the stock to her father, and it is only with difficulty that she can withstand his intentions.

Meanwhile, West keeps Olive supplied in money, telling her the funds have accrued from dividends and the merry whirl continues. A clerk, Burbank, who is in the employ of West, believes West's scheme is but another wildcat project and he seeks to unearth the illegality of his Red Star proposition. Through his efforts, he meets Olive and they become fast friends. One evening, while Olive is being entertained at a house party West becomes intoxicated and when the girl refuses his advances, he attempts to expose her by telling the guests that he is paying her expenses. Olive's so-called friends believe him, and she is ostracized from their society. Then she becomes aware that her father has been duped and she is left penniless. She returns to Omaha, where she is compelled to earn her own living. Years pass and Burbank happens along in Omaha. He recognizes Olive, they renew their acquaintance and the story ends happily.

THE ROYAL

A special Vitaphone subject, "The Countess Vichi's Jewels" is the Royal feature.

Because of an early friendship with his father, Mr. Soper, a wealthy business man, invites young Tisdale, one of his clerks, to his home. At dinner he meets Ruth, Mr. Soper's niece. They are immediately attracted to each other, much to Mrs. Soper's annoyance. Later, despairing of ever receiving another invitation, Tisdale pawns his full dress suit to pay his room rent and when he receives another invitation to spend the week-end at the Soper's country home he decides to wire his regrets. In the telegraph office he overhears a Mr. Rowdin order his suit sent to the Penn. R. R. station. A daring plan occurs to him. He will borrow the suit case, supposing it to contain a dress suit. Giving Rowdin's name, Tisdale gets it and boards the train for the Sopers. Rowdin, discovering the loss of his suit

Dumplings

For Soups, Stews and Fricassees Cook.
Left overs of roast lamb, veal or beef, the cheaper cuts of fresh meats, and fowls too old for roasting, make delicious and nourishing stews. K. C. Dumplings make them doubly attractive and the whole dish is most economical—an object to most families while meats are so high and must be made to go as far as possible.

K C Dumplings

By Mrs. Nevada Briggs, the well known baking expert.
2 cups flour; 3 level teaspoonsful K. C. Baking Powder; 1/2 teaspoonful salt; 1 cup shortening; milk or cream.
Sift together three times, the flour, baking powder and salt; into this work the shortening and use cream or milk to make a dough less stiff than for biscuits.

Allow the stew to boil down so that the liquid does not cover the meat or chicken. Add half a cup of cold water to stop its boiling and drop the dough in large spoonfuls on top of the meat or chicken. Cover and let boil again for 15 minutes.
Made with K. C. Baking Powder and steamed in this way, dumplings are as light as biscuits and are delicious with thickened gravy.
This recipe is adapted from one for Chicken Pot Pie in "The Cook's Book" by Janet McKenzie Hill, editor of the Boston Cooking School Magazine. The book contains 90 excellent recipes for things that are good to eat and that help reduce the cost of living. "The Cook's Book" sent free for the colored certificate packed in every 25-cent can of K. C. Baking Powder. Send to Jaques Mfg. Co., Chicago.

case, is furious, but determines to make his destination, hastily boards the same train and car as Tisdale. They both prove to be guests of the Sopers. When at last Tisdale opens the case he finds a complete burglar kit.

Tisdale dares not tell any one openly. He quietly warns the Countess Vichi, one of the guests to put her jewels in the Soper safe. She does so and is seen by Rowdin. That night Tisdale is attracted by a noise beneath his window, where he sees a man enter the floor below. Instantly there is an explosion and a dark figure hands out the jewels to his confederates, who then disappear. There is great consternation when the robbery is discovered and suspicion is fastened upon Tisdale. Believing the young man innocent, Ruth plans to help him escape. With the aid of a rope, he gets out the window. They rush down to the beach and board the little speed launch. The control is broken and it dashes up on an opposite bank. The robbers, in another launch, land near them and hide their plunder in an old boat house. Ruth and Tisdale follow them and manage to capture both. They bring them back to the Soper home, where they are turned over to the police. They accuse Rowdin of being their leader and he is also arrested. Tisdale and Ruth are heartily congratulated and left alone in the happiness of their engagement.

THE CALUMET

The headline act at the Calumet this week is Earl Dewey and Mabel Rogers and "Their Four Dancing Girls." Dewey possesses an excellent baritone voice which he uses to advantage in a number of new song hits, while Miss Rogers is an able second. Among the song hits are "This is the Life for Me" and "The Polar Bear Rag." The dancing girls are clever exponents of the art of Terpsichore and their graceful execution elicits applause. Among the feature films are "Just a Note," "She Wanted a Count," "An Hour of Terror" and "He Never Knew." The last is a Vitaphone two-part subject in which a young man, adopted when an infant by a wealthy widow, makes love to a woman who really is his mother, and even at her death before their intended marriage, he is unaware of the relationship.

THE CROWN

The Crown tonight and tomorrow offers "Our Mutual Girl," as its feature. Margaret and her aunt, Mrs. Kalkreuth, order the limousine and leave for a down-town shopping tour. They pass the new $6,000,000 postoffice, the largest building of its kind in the world. When they arrive home, a note is found at the door for Margaret in which she is invited to Conard Pier to help welcome the homecoming Glants and White Sox. Of course, Margaret's aunt permits her to accept and the Mutual Girl finds herself among a crowd of rabid rooters. She sees John McGraw, Mike Donlin, Captain Larry Doyle and other stars as they come down the gang plank, and the uproar of the fans. Margaret compliments Dab, the White Sox player, who scored the winning run in London, with a home run, and he returns the hand shake. After viewing the remainder of the massed and players, Margaret is whisked to the home of her aunt. That afternoon at ten, Lieut. John C. -orie of the Royal British navy, is introduced to Margaret and he describes a flight he expects to make across the Atlantic ocean, from Newfoundland to the Irish coast in a Rod and Wamamaker flier.

Before going to her room, the aunt orders the dancing room cleared and noted instructors begin the lesson with an exhibition of the Maxixe.

THE PEOPLE'S

"The Romance of an Actor" a Powers two reel subject, features the People's offering.

As the lives of artists go, Lloyd Meredith, an actor and dramatist, is at the height of prosperity one season while the next he is at his last extremity. When the story opens he has just finished and had accepted a drama in which he is to play the title role.

At the opening performance, Alice Warren, the daughter of well-to-do people who hold actors in disdain, becomes madly infatuated with Meredith. Her parents labor with her, but she is of an independent spirit and writes the actor, declaring her love and expressing her determination to see him often.

At her solicitation he admits her to his dressing room. He asks her if she does not realize the folly of writing sentimental notes to actors? The girl breaks down and leaves—howbeit, with considerable respect for the actor.

Meredith takes an interest in the girl and their acquaintanceship ripens into love. Against the wishes of the girl's parents they are married. Meredith sinks all his money into a beautiful home, but neglects to have it insured. One night their house burns to the ground and Meredith has a hard time in saving even his wife from the flames. While he is fighting for her life he is wounded in the eye; his face is disfigured.

Meredith is again poor and begins to write another play. The young wife does not enjoy life with the wolf at the door and she begins to lose interest in her disfigured husband. Despite his objections, she goes to work as a stenographer for the manager of a mill, and finally she decides to leave her husband for her employer.

The playwright is so poor that he can't even pay the gas bill of eighty-nine cents. However, he sells his play and returns home to tell his wife. He finds her note, saying that she has left him for another. This is more than he can bear. He stops up a crevice which might admit air, turns on the gas and throws himself upon the bed to await the end.

In the meantime two other things are taking place. The wife has decided that she loves her husband and is returning to him. The gas company has decided that Meredith's bill cannot run longer and a man is dispatched to turn it off. As the gas man turns off the gas in the basement, the wife is trying to get into her apartment upstairs. The landlady unlocks the door—Meredith comes to, and the gas man enters with the announcement that "You'll have to pay that eighty-nine cents before you get enough gas to commit suicide."

THE LYRIC

"The Medicine Man's Vengeance," a two-reel feature, is the attraction at the Lyric theatre.

Steve, falsely accused of having stolen the gold left in his care by miners, flees from the wrath of the victims. He writes a note to his sweetheart, Ellen, requesting her to meet him. Steve comes upon a Moqui funeral canoe bearing the body of White Cloud, Chief Big Elk's squaw. He finds that the woman is not dead, but in a comatose state. Steve revives her and takes her back to her people. The Moquis hail Steve as a miracle worker and make him Medicine Man. Later, when he wishes to meet Ellen, the Indians refuse to let him depart. White Cloud goes to the rendezvous and informs Ellen of Steve's predicament. Ellen returns to the settlement and persuades the miners to go to the rescue. Binfield and Wetlock, the men who stole the miners' gold, arrive at the Moqui village with their loot. They are discovered by Steve. The rescue party appears and Steve's innocence is established. The robbers are placed under arrest.

The Moqui Medicine Man, fearing Steve's hold upon the Indians, poisons him with the juice of the loca weed. Steve loses his mind and wanders aimlessly about. He is found by White Cloud, who stops a party of miners on their way to town for machinery. She and Steve are placed in one of the wagons. They are seen by the Moqui Medicine Man, who informs Big Elk that White Cloud is eloping with Steve. Binfield and Wetlock escape. Hastening to the Indian village they urge Big Elk to attack the miners. In the battle which follows, the miners are slain. The renegades also perish. Steve, however, escapes. To punish White Cloud for her supposed unfaithfulness, Big Elk places her against a wagon and by means of poisoned arrows shot into her hands, transfixes his squaw to the wood. Steve recovers. He comes upon Big Elk gloating over the body of White Cloud. Horrified, Steve sends a bullet through the murderer's heart.

Little Marion Rice will sing at the Lyric tonight.

ADVICE TO HUSBANDS.

When your wife is becomingly gown-ed tell her so.
When she waits dinner until late for you act pleased.
Call her the "dear" once in awhile that you worked overtime before she took your name.
Don't demonstrate your affection as if from force of habit. Some men kiss their wives in the same manner that they glance at the clock before leaving for work.
Go into your own kitchen once in awhile. Wash and wipe the dishes or scour the frying pan. Laugh while you are doing it.
Develop a sense of humor.
Don't complain about your wife's cooking for when a man marries a woman he does not always marry a cook.—Dr. Sarah N. Merrick, in Lev-elo's.

INDEPENDENCE DAY FETE

WILL BE SAFE AND SANE

NO PUBLIC DEMONSTRATION
WILL BE HELD IN LAURIUM —ENGAGE BAND.

The meeting of business men which was called by President Joseph Willis last evening at the request of several merchants, failed to materialize and as a result, a safe and sane program will mark the day in Laurium. Meanwhile a half dozen Hecia street merchants conducted a quiet canvass and a sufficient sum was procured to engage the Laurium band for the entire day and evening. Virtually, this will constitute Laurium's celebration.

During the week of the Fourth, the Park association will conduct its mid-summer carnival and this, it is believed, will be an attraction sufficient to draw people from all towns of the county. The carnival company is a big enterprise, in fact one of the largest that has ever come to the copper country, and the promoters insure none but the most novel acts. The free acts will be big attractions in themselves and because of merriment which the carnival will create, the businessmen are content to let that constitute their celebration.

In view of the fact that the council has made no provision for pyrotechnics, it is not unlikely that the Park association will arrange a big fireworks display on the carnival grounds for the night of the Fourth.

Members of the council urge that citizens of Laurium join with Red Jacket in its celebration and an appropriate observance of Independence day thereby will be afforded.

SERVED OLEO; PAYS FINE.

J. H. Ross, Proprietor of Central Hotel, Enters Plea of Guilty.

J. H. Ross, proprietor of the Central hotel on Osceola street, entered a plea of guilty in Justice Armit's court yesterday to a charge of violating the state pure food laws. The specific charge was that Ross used and served oleomargarine without displaying the sign that the state prescribes. The complaint was issued by Deputy Food Inspector John T. Rowe and the case was prosecuted by Assistant Prosecutor William McCormick. Because of the fact that this was the first offense of Ross, the court levied the minimum fine of $50.

John Fazekas, the father of little Mary Fazekas who was shot and seriously wounded in a clash between strikers and deputies at Wolverine on Labor day of last year, was sentenced to twenty days in the county jail by Justice Armit Wednesday evening. Fazekas was booked on a charge of drunkenness. After sentence was passed, the defendant told the court that he could not find work and that the county must support his family.
